

Navigating California's Senate Bill 553

Secure Compliance, Safeguard Your Team

In the wake of California's Senate Bill 553, workplace safety has taken on new urgency.

What You Need To Know:

- 1. Senate Bill 553 applies to most employers in California.
- 2. The law requires employers to create a comprehensive workplace violence prevention plan (WVPP).
- 3. The law also requires employers to record information about every workplace violence incident, post-incident response, and investigation.

EmergencyOS Can Help You Be Compliant

Don't have a written workplace violence intervention procedure yet? You're not alone, but it's time to take action.

Account for Every Individual

Conduct real-time digital roll calls and building sweeps, prioritizing those who need immediate assistance.

Customize Emergency Responses

Build tailored profiles for different scenarios, including workplace violence, with easy-to-use emergency response workflows.

Communicate in Real Time

Instantly alert the right people with customizable notifications during emergencies, ensuring swift, coordinated action.

Maintain Flawless Records

Automatically track and log incidents, evacuee details, and in-depth information about emergency responses with robust reports, ensuring you're compliant and audit-ready.

Harness Actionable Insights

Leverage comprehensive data to continuously enhance your workplace violence intervention plan.

Don't Risk Non-Compliance. Protect Your People and Your Business

Take proactive steps today to safeguard your workplace and ensure compliance with EmergencyOS, your partner in comprehensive workplace violence prevention.

Request a demo today!

